

A SCALABLE SOLUTION AND LONG-STANDING RELATIONSHIP

Industrial Alliance Auto and Home Insurance (iAAH) offers a full range of insurance products. The company is active and highly respected across the province. Its diverse clients include young adults who just received their driver's license and retired couples with second homes.

ONGOING DIGITAL BUSINESS

Before Projet Cirrus came onto the scene, Micro Logic had already been one of iAAH's IT solution providers for several years. The insurance company regularly entrusted it with technical assistance needs.

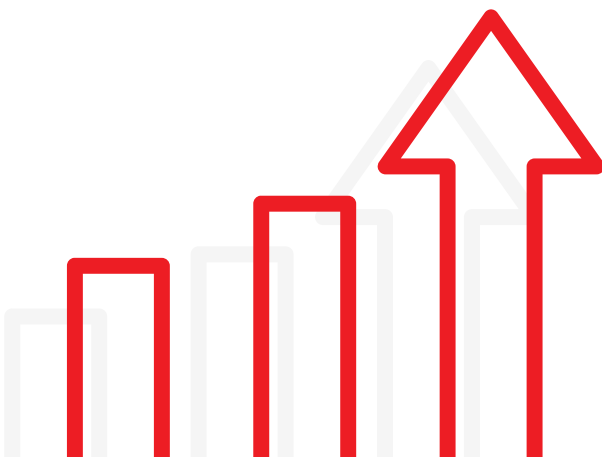

Over time, the company's activities grew and so did their need for flexibility. Seeking to modernize its IT solutions, the tech team began research to find a better-adapted, scalable product.

DOING BUSINESS LOCALLY

Working with Projet Cirrus also meant taking advantage of proximity: offices in Quebec City and Montreal, technicians available 24/7 and Cloud solutions hosted in data centers located exclusively in Canada.

For Sébastien Lévesque, Director of IT Infrastructure, working with people from the Quebec City region is a huge advantage: "Instead of doing business with a big company and feeling like a number, we preferred to sign with an SME that offered us total support. No matter the request or the time, response by Projet Cirrus was always fast and the service was always courteous. It's the kind of attention that makes all the difference and makes you want to continue a business relationship."

Thanks to the service and advice from Projet Cirrus experts, and the long-term business relationship between the companies, iAAH was able to quickly reach its goal: optimizing its business with complete peace of mind.

COMPREHENSIVE SOLUTION AND PEACE OF MIND

Given its trusted partnership with Micro Logic, doing business with Projet Cirrus was the practical and advantageous choice. In addition to trust, iAAH knew that it wouldn't need to explain its needs and specifics at length, because Micro Logic's Projet Cirrus team was already familiar with iAAH's business.

After meeting with a Projet Cirrus expert, a complete data replication solution seemed to be the option to best meet iAAH's needs.

The Projet Cirrus Support solution is not only turnkey; it can be operated almost effortlessly.

In just a few months, system and network administrators worked with Projet Cirrus' team to implement the Projet Cirrus Support solution.

The major advantage is that once implementation was completed, iAAH administrators were able to resume their activities, since everything is managed automatically by Projet Cirrus.

As the Projet Cirrus Support solution allows continuous data replication to a secure infrastructure, everything can be quickly restored in case of server failure or cyberattack. In the future, iAAH can completely avoid the emergencies and crises that mobilized their entire tech team. Even better for the wellbeing of network administrators: business continuity tests can be conducted during the day, in the middle of the workweek.

Long maintenance scheduled for the weekend to avoid interrupting other employees' activities is a thing of the past!
